An excursion to Kutná Hora, a provincial town of great charm with a splendid late-Gothic cathedral, now a UNESCO World Heritage site.

The most beautiful city in Central Europe, Prague enjoys an unequalled density of great architecture, from Romanesque to modern, but it is the fabric of the city as a whole as much as the individual masterpieces that makes it so special. The city is splendidly sited on a crescent of hills rising from one side of a majestic bend in the River Vltava and across the gently inclined terrain on the other bank. A carapace of red roofs, green domes and gilded spires rise above marvellously unspoilt streets and alleys and magically picturesque squares.

The 14th century was a high point in Prague's history, when kings of Bohemia were also Holy Roman Emperors, and the city became one of the largest in the western world. The cathedral rising from within the precincts of the hilltop castle complex is one of the many monuments of that golden age. The pattern of innovation and excellence continued; some of the finest Renaissance and Baroque buildings north of the Alps are located here, and Classicism and Historicism are amply represented.

The spirit of national revival and the achievement of independence (in 1918) inspired a ferment of creativity among artists, writers and composers. A variety of styles drew on earlier Bohemian traditions, Art Nouveau was pushed in innovatory directions and the dawn of modernism is manifest in some beautiful, precocious and unique architecture.

It's not all buildings: the beautifully converted Convent of St Agnes displays one of the world's best collections of medieval panel paintings, there is Mucha stained glass in the cathedral, European Old Masters in the Schwarzenberg Palace and the incomparable Art Nouveau decoration in the Municipal House. In the city of Smetana and Dvořák, and where Mozart had his most enthusiastic audiences, there is a range of historic opera houses and concert halls.

Prague, Tyn Church.

Itinerary

Day 1. Fly mid-morning from London Heathrow to Prague (British Airways). After settling into the hotel, there is an introductory lecture and dinner.

Day 2. Morning exploration of the ancient core of the city (Staré Město) on the right bank of the Vltava. A dense maze of picturesque streets and alleys converges on Old Town Square, surely the prettiest urban space in Europe, with shimmeringly beautiful façades – medieval, Renaissance, Baroque and Art Nouveau. Visit the Church of St. James, a Gothic shell encrusted with Baroque finery, and the Gothic Tyn Church, which lies at the heart of both Prague and Czech history. Special private visit to the glorious suite of assembly rooms created 1904–12 in the Obecní dům ('Municipal House'), a unique and very Czech mélange of murals and ornament. In the afternoon see one of the world's greatest collections of medieval painting brilliantly installed in the 13th-century Convent of St. Agnes. Early evening stage performance in the Smetana Hall of the Obecní dům: Czech Christmas Mass (Jan Jakub Ryba, 1765–1815) performed by the Prague Symphony Orchestra.

Day 3. Drive to Prague Castle, an extensive hilltop citadel, residence of dukes and kings of Bohemia from the 10th century and now of the President. The Old Royal Palace rises from Romanesque through Gothic to Renaissance, the chief glory being the Vladislav Hall with its extraordinary late-Gothic vaulting. The Cathedral of St. Vitus is a pioneering monument of High Gothic, richly embellished with sculpture, paintwork and stained glass. Afternoon visit of the private exhibition at the Lobkowitz Palace which contains a fascinating collection of paintings, decorative art and rare music manuscripts.

Day 4: Kutná Hora. Excursion into the Bohemian countryside. In the Middle Ages, Kutná Hora acquired great wealth from the nearby silver mines. Now a small provincial town of great charm, it possesses the stunning late-Gothic St. Barbara's Church, the creation of Bohemia's finest medieval architects, whose work we also see in Prague. Afternoon visit of the former Cistercian cathedral of Our Lady of Sedlec in the suburbs of Kutná Hora which was ingeniously rebuilt by Jan Santini Aichel in the early 18th century. It is a work of exceptional aesthetic value harmoniously linking Gothic and Baroque architecture.

Day 5. The history of the Jewish community is an indelibly fascinating aspect of Prague's history. In the former ghetto, the Josefov, there remain six synagogues, town hall and cemetery. Continue to the 'New Town' (Nové Město, 1348), in and around Wenceslas Square, threading through a succession of arcades, and see the outstanding turn-of-the-century architecture and early modernist masterpieces.

Day 6, Christmas Day. Morning walk across 14th-century Charles Bridge, the greatest surviving such medieval structure. In the 'Lesser Town' (Malá Strana) visit the magnificent church of St Nicholas, one of the finest Baroque churches of Central Europe. Alternatively opt for a free morning and attend a church service before Christmas lunch. Evening opera at the State Opera: La Bohème (Puccini).

Day 7. Strahov Monastery has commanding views over Prague and two magnificent library halls, which we see by special arrangement. Then walk down the hill, passing the formidable bulk of the Černín Palace and the delightful façade of the Loreto Church. Visit also the Schwarzenberg Palace and its fine collection of Old Masters. Evening opera at the State Opera: Rusalka (Dvořák).

Day 8. Fly from Prague, arriving at London Heathrow at midday.
